- Vestry and Search committee maintain confidentiality of names of priests under consideration
- Vestry and Search committee communicate and share progress of search process as it unfolds with congregation
- Canon and Bishop survey landscape of wider church for priests possessing gifts which align with values, culture, and needs of the congregations in the Diocese
- Canon discusses candidates with Bishop for "Diocesan fit" and congregational options
- Canon discusses congregations in search with counterparts in other dioceses at regular intervals (more on this in Phase III)

Search Committee Selection

A Search Committee is normally somewhere between 7-12 persons. One or two Vestry members should be appointed to serve on the Search Committee in order to act as liaison and information link between the two bodies. The main work of the Search Committee is active listening. As much as is practicable, the composition of the Search Committee should reflect the congregation's diversity, including people of different ages, race, gender, length of membership, and liturgical/musical preferences. This group needs to be equipped for the responsibility of assessing the knowledge, ability and skills of the candidates in light of the identity of the congregation, of which they are representative.

Each member of the Search Committee must be able to represent the broad interests of the congregation at large. Thus, individuals who may be specifically focused on a single issue, activity, or otherwise are usually not good choices. Openly disaffected persons are generally not helpful to a Search Committee. It is not appropriate for staff or other clergy to serve on the Search Committee. Generally, the Senior Warden should not serve on the Search Committee because all of his or her energies should be devoted to keeping the church going during the transition period. No two people from the same household or immediate family should be on the Search Committee. Please note, this is not the time to recruit all those in the congregation with corporate human resource experience to become members of the Search Committee. Search Committee members will receive candidate names and learn appropriate interview skills. They are primarily asked to be part of a discernment and calling process which is a shared spiritual journey, not a secular hiring process.

The Vestry should attempt to select people with open hearts and minds who will be sensitive to the culture and dreams of the congregation as a whole. Desirable characteristics for all Search Committee members are:

- They must be involved in the church as a community of faith, regular in their attendance at worship, givers of record, who are actively involved in the programmatic life of the congregation.
- They must be good listeners. Regardless of whether they agree or not, the members of the Search Committee must be able to listen accurately and respectfully to a broad range of opinions expressed by all sorts and conditions of people.
- They must be able to maintain confidentiality. This is absolutely essential to the success of the search effort, and to the reputation of both the congregation and the candidates. Those who cannot resist the temptation to share a secret, or prove that they are "in the know" should simply not be on the Search Committee.
- They must be team players, have significant emotional maturity, and be able and willing to work productively with, and in the presence of, significant anxiety, tension, and potentially overt conflict.
 Search work requires a willingness to "speak the truth in love," to ask "difficult" questions, and to confront deeply held assumptions.

Regular and faithful attendance at Search Committee meetings and an ability to travel are also essential. A good rule of thumb is to plan for one evening meeting each week for approximately six months. Some teams will work faster than this, some will need more time; there will be periods where the team may not meet for several weeks, there will be times when the team will meet several times in the course of a week. Thus "seasonal members" or those whose employment requires extensive travel or uncertain time commitments would not generally be considered effective members. Travel for candidate visits is an important part of search work.
